

Commercial Litigation Services

Parr Brown's commercial litigation attorneys are nationally recognized for their successes in numerous high-stakes commercial litigation cases across the U.S. In fact, many Parr Brown attorneys are admitted to practice in state courts in jurisdictions in addition to Utah, as well as in federal district courts throughout the U.S., in U.S. Circuit Courts of Appeals, and before the U.S. Supreme Court.

Parr Brown's commercial litigators pursue result-oriented approaches to resolving our client's legal disputes. Often our attorneys resolve such disputes through early mediation or settlement conferences, saving our clients time and money. However, when litigation or arbitration is unavoidable, our commercial litigation attorneys have extensive trial experience before judges, juries, and arbitrators. Such experience is critical to giving our clients the best possible chance of prevailing at trial.

In addition to this deep experience in understanding the commercial litigation process, our commercial litigators have specific knowledge about numerous industries, which provides a head-start on factual investigations that establish the foundation for successful claims and defenses. In addition, our trial lawyers seek strong relationships with each of our clients, which maximizes the synergy between our clients' first-hand knowledge of their industry and the facts of their case, and our lawyers' experience in gathering and refining that knowledge into polished trial themes. This partnership allows us to efficiently and effectively guide our clients through the commercial litigation process.

What Is Commercial Litigation

Commercial or Business litigation is a lawsuit between two business entities where no criminal charges are involved. Commercial litigation can involve anything from contract disputes to class action suits and other allegations that may arise in a business context.
